Scamnation

According to the October 2012 Consumer Reports Magazine in an article titled scamnation about Solar energy systems "making the big up-front investment is the equivalent of paying for 30 to 40 years of electricity in advance" it further warns that there are "lots of variables" that "can confound payback, including living where cloudy weather is commonplace"

Fixcarver would be thrilled if the route 44 solar installation paid for itself in thirty to forty years. There is more theft going on in this project than 5 measly solar panels. Include in your list of variables that can confound payback government bureaucrats like Sarah Hewins, Jack Hunter and overpaid underperforming consultants like Glen Berkowitz with political agendas and a paycheck dependent upon these kinds of scams.
